secured restraining the State from proceeding to collect the taxes pending a final decision of the points involved. The last General Assembly took the matter up, and by an act authorized the appointment of a commission to negotiate with the railroad with a view of compromising the claim for back taxes on the understanding that the railroad would surrender its exemption claims and pay regular taxes in the future.

After months of negotiation this commission finally reached an agreement with the officers of the railroad company.

The matter was about to be finally ratified when C. D. Langhorne, a minority stockholder, set up the claim that since the road was exempt from taxation, any payment to the State on the part of the directors was an improper diversion of the funds of the road, and consequently an injury to the rights of the stockholders. All parties seemed to agree that it would be well to make a test of the legality of the agreement before it took effect, so with the consent, if not the approval, of all parties, Mr. Langhorne applied to the City Circuit Court, through Page & Leary, of Richmond, for an injunction restraining the officers of the railroad from paying over the money, and restraining the State Auditor of Public Accounts and the supervisors and treasurers of counties and cities through which the road runs, from receiving the money or ratifying the agreement.

ers of the railroad from paying over the money, and restraining the State Auditor of Public Accounts and the supervisors and treasurers of counties and cities through which the road runs, from receiving the money or ratifying the agreement.

A. Caperton Braxton appeared for the railroad company and Attorney-General Williams for the State, Judge Scott dismissing the application in a written opinion, holding the compromise and the act under which the commission is authorized to proceed as valid. The refusal of a writ of error merely confirms this opinion and ends the case, allowing the State and the railroad company to proceed to put the compromise settlement into effect.

DEATHS

TYLER.—Died, Tuesday morning at 3:45 o'clock, BERTHA P. TYLER, daughter of Stanley B. and Bertha Pleasant Tyler, of Norfolk, Va. Funeral from residence, 102 South First Street, THIS MORNING.

WARREN.—Entered into rest at 8 P. M., on June 10, 1913, at her residence in this city, MRS. ANNIE E. WARREN, widow of George W. Warren, Sr., in the sixty-seventh year of her age. Funeral at 11 o'clock THURSDAY MORNING from Monumental Church. Interment private. No flowers.

FOSTER.—Died, at his late residence, in Leesburg, Loudoun County, Va., at 5:30 P. M., JUNE 10, CAPTAIN JAMES WILLIAM FOSTER. Funeral notice later.

CAPTAIN JAMES WILLIAM FOSTER.

DEPARTED THIS LIFE, AT HIS residence, in Leesburg, Va., on the 10th day of June, 1913, CAPTAIN JAMES WILLIAM FOSTER, after a protracted illness. Captain Foster, the son of the late Thomas R. Foster, deceased, was born in Fauquier County, Va., in 1844. When just seventeen he enlisted in the Confederate army, first serving with the command of General Turner Ashby, and later with Colonel Mosby, serving with conspicuous gallantry throughout the war, as captain in the latter command. After the close of the war he graduated in the law at the University of Virginia, and for some time practiced in partnership with the late General Eppa Hunton. For several terms he was attorney for the Commonwealth for the county of Loudoun. He was widely known and always recognized as a lawyer of eminent ability and of the highest character, in both of which features he was regarded an ornament and an exemplar.

In 1880 he married Miss Mary Mitchell, granddaughter of the late General Leslie Combs, of Kentucky, who, with four children, viz., J. W. Foster, J. M. Foster, Francis Greene, of Richmond; Miss Leslie Foster, and Allen Thurman Foster, survive.

While the profession of the law was his life-work, Captain Foster was possessed of fine talent for organization, and great constructive and executive ability as a man of affairs. In the early nineties, without necessary means, indeed almost without anything save his energy, his high character, his engaging personality, he organized that great industry in Nelson County, at Schuylers, called the Virginia Soapstone Company, the development of which, quickly there was no money for the payroll, such was the confidence and faith of his employees in the man. Thus was his personality impressed upon a struggling industry, with the result that prosperity succeeded want; and where formerly a wilderness was found may now be seen the comfortable and happy homes of the three hundred or more of the employees of the Virginia Soapstone Company.

The announcement of the demise of this most estimable and delightful gentleman will carry genuine sorrow to the hearts of the multitude of his friends, embracing all of whatever class, who have ever had the privilege and pleasure of knowing him—admired by all, and best loved by those who knew him best. For it is not extravagant to say of him that in whatever relation of son, husband, father, brother, friend or patriot—his long life of noble usefulness, his devotion to the happiness and well-being of all with whom he associated, was unselfish and without flaw. From human standpoint and with humble reverence it may well and truly be said: "Behold an Israelite, indeed, in whom is no guile." A FRIEND.

FAMOUS SCOUT IS LAID TO REST

Rev. Frank Stringfellow, Civil War Hero, Died Suddenly in Orange County.

The funeral of the Rev. Frank Stringfellow, a famous scout of the Confederate Army, who died suddenly on Sunday at Lindsay, Va., was conducted yesterday afternoon from the residence of R. M. Green, 123 North Washington Street, Alexandria, by the Rev. W. J. Morton, rector of Christ Episcopal Church. The interment was made in Ivy Hill Cemetery. The pallbearers were J. J. Green, R. M. Green, James F. Muir, B. L. Jacobs, James Kerr Barr and K. W. Ogden.

Mr. Stringfellow was seventy-two years old. Several months ago he came to Richmond for an operation in the Memorial Hospital and returned home apparently in good health. His death is understood to be due to organic heart trouble. He was widely connected in Virginia, being a brother of Major Charles S. Stringfellow, of Richmond, who died last year. Mr. Stringfellow leaves a widow, three daughters—Mrs. Ida Barr, of New Orleans; Mrs. Lee Shultice, of Norfolk; and Mrs. Janie Patton, of Orange County—and three sons.

His career in the Confederacy was unique and daring in the extreme. He volunteered his services as a young man to General J. E. B. Stuart as a scout at the outbreak of the war, and after years of valiant and distinguished feats, was transferred to the staff of General Robert E. Lee, with the rank of captain. The notable deeds he performed are chronicled in John Esten Cooke's history of the struggle and Mr. Stringfellow's own volume, "Scout Life." During the Spanish-American War he was chaplain of the Fourth Infantry Regiment, Virginia Volunteers.

After years of self-education and preparation, Mr. Stringfellow was ordained as a minister of the Episcopal Church in 1876, and in the years which followed held charges in Powhatan, Middlesex and other counties of Virginia. He was particularly distinguished in the public eye as a lecturer on war topics and had spoken from the platform in practically every Virginia town.

John Esten Cooke paid Mr. Stringfellow this fine compliment in his history of the war:

"He was passionately devoted to his dangerous calling, following it from predilection, not from any hope of reward or spurred on by ambition of distinction; he was never so happy as when beating up the quarters of the enemy and throwing them into confusion by some sudden attack. He was not an officer and never moved a finger to secure a commission. All he asked was permission to mount his horse, wander off and seek the neighborhood of the enemy's camp in search of incident and adventure, and always preferred to be alone and follow his appointed work without assistance, depending only upon his strong arm and trusty weapons.

"His record is replete with daring instances that rendered valuable and untold information to his commander, and in this perilous field of daring adventure he gained the name of one of the most noted and daring scouts known in the annals of the war for the Southern Confederacy, and was so regarded by his superiors."
